Amusements.

The biggest minstrel company in the world, Richards & Pringle's Rascoo & Holland's Big Minstrel Festival will be the attraction at the McKennon opera house Wednesday, October 25. This famous company, which has delighted and made thousands laugh in the past, and which will do likewise with countless multitudes in the future, presents this season the most attractive list of novelties that it has ever offered, with more comedians, more singers, more dancers and a better musical organization than ever before. The program is replete with new ballads, sketches and funny sayings and dialogues, and the fun runs riot and furious, as the screams of delight and volumes of applause will testify. The entire bill is devoted to laughing purposes only, with enough ballads and sentiment for a relaxation of the muscles after a prolonged spell of merriment. Never before has there been such a stupendous outlay of money made for minstrel production, both in securing the best available talent and in scenery and costuming. The free street parade at 2:30 p. m. is emblematic of the mammoth proportions to which the organization has grown.

The Kingfisher Free Press is striking out in all directions in its fight on local saloons. The Free Press doesn't like the music in the saloons and says: "What is the purpose of this villainous old piano whanging from dawn until late at night? What sort of a town would we have if an old, worn out, breaking piano organ was placed in every business house and some one hired to pound on it from morning until midnight?"

Cleveland Triangle. Last Thursday a whirlwind of large dimensions passed through the town and presented some curious sights. A mule cart that was coming up the street saw the cloud of dust which arose like pillar, meandering up the street, and started to go around it, but they were both of the same mind. A mule cart that was struck the mule amidstships. The mule felt that something was wrong, and retaliated according to mule ethics by giving the whirlwind a pair of good, healthy kicks and ran up the street like a dog with a cat tied to its tail.
